Army To Answer AF On Close Support

The Army's views on Air Force close-air-support doctrine will be defined in a report now being whipped into shape at the Pentagon for presentation to the House Armed Services Committee.

The report was requested by Representative Leon H. Gavin (R-Pa.), a senior member of the Committee.

It follows on the heels of an Air Force study—first revealed exclusively in THE JOURNAL (23 March)—which charged that Army and AF doctrines are "in conflict."

The Air Force said it retains responsibility for close air support of the Army, under the terms of the recent roles and

SecDef Wilson Carries Pay Bill Ball; Cordiner Plan Seen Saving $5-Billion

SECRETARY of Defense Charles E. Wilson has marched the military pay adjustment bill to the White House.

He hopes to convince the Commander-in-Chief and then Congress that its enactment this year is essential to pave the way for great savings in Federal expenditures and enhance the striking capability of the Armed Services.

Secretary Wilson apparently is convinced that President Eisenhower will back up this contention, for the Pentagon chief has advised Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee that pay legislation is on the way.

It was learned late this week that a

Pentagon pay bill has reached the Bureau of the Budget, which acts on behalf of the President.

Mr. Wilson is said to be ready to bring before the National Security Council a forceful message of great economies and substantially increased efficiency that would be possible by adoption of a new military pay structure.

The behind-the-scenes ammunition that Secretary Wilson is employing in this campaign was displayed to the Nation this week as Chairman Ralph J. Cordiner and his Advisory Committee met with newsmen in Washington on 26 March.

OBJECTIVITY—ORIENTAL STYLE

BY GEN. LAURENCE S. KUTER, USAF
Commander, Far East Air Force

ON the 9th of March 1945 Brigadier General Roger M. Ramey led 334 Superfortresses which dropped about 2,000 tons of incendiary bombs on twenty-two numbered industrial targets and innumerable subsidiary and home industries in the city of Tokyo. On this night United States Air Force Superfortresses delivered the most devastating single attack in all the annals of warfare. More people died in the fire that night than in either A-bomb attack five months later. That night in Tokyo 15.8 densely populated square miles were consumed before midnight by a fire storm so intense that no debris was left from frame, bamboo and paper houses and their contents. Japanese police records showed that 267,171 buildings were destroyed (about 1/4 of the total in Tokyo), 1,008,005 persons were rendered homeless, and the official role of casualties list 83,793 dead and 40,918 wounded. With that vast, sudden, shocking loss it became evident in the national capital of Japan that the war had been lost.

On the morning of 11 June 1956, Lt. Gen. Roger Ramey was formally presented Emperor Hirohito's Order of the Rising Sun, Second Class, by Minister Naka Funada in the presence of the civilian leaders of the Defense Agency of Japan and the uniformed Chairman of Japan's Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Chief of Staff and the principal staff officers of the Japanese Air Defense Force, and half a dozen senior members of our own Far East Air Forces.

Army Describes New Pentomic Divisions; 7 Named; Says Manpower Needs Remain

THE Army late this week identified seven divisions undergoing "Pentomic" reorganization and said that within the next two years all tactical divisions will be tailored for atomic battle.

Newly named for reorganization are the 4th Armored and 4th Infantry Divisions at Ft. Hood, Tex., and Ft. Lewis, Wash., respectively.

This marked the first time that the Army at the Pentagon has been permitted officially to name "Pentomic" units.

Previously, local commands were authorized to announce that the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii, the 1st Armored at Ft. Polk, La., 1st Infantry at Ft. Riley, Kans., and the 11th Airborne in Germany are following the streamlined pattern of the pioneer "Pentomic" 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

"It is patent," said the Pentagon, "that the most significant factor affecting the Army's future concepts is the introduction of atomic weapons to the battlefield—a battlefield characterized by wide dispersal of units both in the offense and defense."

The battle group, a unit force about the size of a scaled-down regiment, will be the key element in the new division

ARMY AVIATION

The Department of Defense has issued a Directive (No. 5160.22) embodying all the restrictions placed upon Army Aviation in recent months. It replaces entirely the older "Memorandum of Understanding" between the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Air Force relating to Army organic aviation, which is now cancelled.

The full text of the New Directive is printed on page 11 of this issue of THE JOURNAL.

structure. It will be able to operate independently and defend in future battle areas.

The Army said that four major principles have been developed for the new divisions:

1. Ready adaptability of units to requirements of the atomic battlefield.
2. Pooling at higher echelons of elements not habitually required in the division.
3. Recognition of the increased span of

ANC AND MSC REVERSE

The Army has reversed its decision to release about 188 Nurses and Medical Specialists Corps officers who, at age 55, are unable to complete 20 years' active duty by their 57th birthday.

Earlier plans to release them were challenged by House Armed Services Committee Counsel John R. Blandford during hearings on their career bill which now has been passed by the House. Mr. Blandford pointed out that it would be incongruous to let these officers go at a time when such categories of personnel are in short supply.

The Army has now decided that reserve nurses and MSC officers who can complete 20 years between their 57th and 60th birthday have an opportunity to stay until they have qualified for retirement.

Gen. Kuter Describes Japanese Honors

earlier was rendered the highest Japanese honors for his role in the redawn of the Rising Sun embraces not only a dramatic illustration of the effectiveness of an Air Force general in attaining two U.S. national objectives of radically differing nature, but astonishing illustration of the objectivity of the Japanese. In 1945 in furtherance of U.S. national policy General Ramey and his Air Force command had leading roles in extinguishing the Rising Sun. Eleven years later, while supporting a radical reversal of U.S. national policy, he and his command were singled out by the Japanese administration for very high honors for being instrumental in the restoration of the Rising Sun.

The holocaust resulting from the attack which he led caused not only the destruction of a sizable component of the will and ability of Japan to continue hopeless but ruthless and determined fighting in the Pacific, but also caused the death by fire of countless thousands of women, children, the aged and the infirm. At the time of the attack radio Tokyo labeled that raid as "slaughter bombing." The results were compared to the holocaust to Rome caused by the Emperor Nero, even though the losses in Tokyo exceeded those losses in Rome or that of any of the other great conflagrations of the Western World. Tokyo lost five times as many acres by midnight that night as were consumed in the whole course of the Chicago fire in 1871. Tokyo lost more than ten times the number of buildings that night than the earthquake destroyed in San Francisco in 1906. Minister Funada himself, several of his civilian assistants and most of his uniformed officers lost homes, families or friends in that holocaust. It is difficult for the Western mind to believe that the Japanese could feel anything other than deep and lasting hatred and determination for revenge against General Roger Ramey and all he stood for. On the contrary, in 1954, '55 and '56 Japanese administration and civilian authorities without fail demonstrated regard, respect and sometimes affection for General Ramey, the Americans under his command, and all they stood for. The award to General Ramey in 1956 highlighted the extraordinary situation.

The Order of the Rising Sun, Second Class, is quite beautiful military jewelry. A multi-petaled gold chrysanthemum-shaped medallion, with a large central ruby-like jewel, is hung on a red and white ribbon around the neck and a large sunburst, also a gold chrysanthemum with a jeweled center, is worn on the left side of the tunic. Before placing these decorations around General Ramey's neck and on his tunic Minister Funada read in Japanese from an elaborate scroll the citation of the Emperor and the signature of the Prime Minister and the Master of Ceremonies of the Imperial Household. In careful and precise English he then made a brief and gracious speech of appreciation for the great and good things General Ramey and his command had just done for the fledgling Japanese Air Defense Force and the close understanding and warm friendship which had been generated between American and Japanese airmen in the new jet age.

After appropriate photographs were made of the presentation ceremony and after the Japanese and American officials present had congratulated General Ramey on his high honor, the Minister asked that we join him around his large brocade conference table for what he apologetically called an American cup of coffee. After Minister Funada saw that we each had our coffee and were offered cigarettes of our choice, he turned to General Ramey beside him and said, "General Ramey, what was your experience in World War II?"

General Ramey responded that he had had both command and staff service. The Commander of FEAF followed with understandable promptness with his observations on the progress of Japanese pilots in learning to fly American jet aircraft.

Without being at all rude, Minister Funada redirected attention to General Ramey and asked of General Ramey the same question in almost identical words. General Ramey then stated that his command and staff experience had occurred during World War II not only in the field but in the Pentagon. The Commander of FEAF, making another gallant try, promptly asked the Minister if he was satisfied with the progress of the Japanese aviation industry in their programs to manufacture jet trainers and the jet fighter for the Japanese Air Defense Force.

For the third time, politely but persistently, the undaunted Minister asked General Ramey to outline in some detail his service and experience in World War II. Knowing full well that Minister Funada was quite familiar with his career, General Ramey finally, in brief, simple, direct terms answered the question, stating that during the entire course of World War II he was primarily engaged in fighting the Japanese Air Force. He outlined his experience at Pearl Harbor where he had command of some B-17s which never got into that action at all. He referred to his very difficult service in Australia when the Japanese Air Force had almost uncontested superiority in the air. He outlined his tough and almost fruitless task when he was one of the commanders of the first Superfortresses from the only bases then available which were in the vicinity of Calcutta, India. From those bases he endeavored to refuel at Chengtu in Western Central China and then drop relatively few bombs on steel plants in Kyushu, the southwestern island of Japan. General Ramey acknowledged his leadership of a most active Superfortress wing from the Marianas in its highly effective, in fact, catastrophic effectiveness in the strategic air assault of the main islands of Japan.

After his conclusion Minister Funada expressed with unquestioned sincerity his feeling of great good fortune that the fledgling Air Force of modern Japan had the great advantage of the experience,

Army Finally Tells Of Pentomic Divisions

control possible through improved signal communications.

4. Adaptability to the integration of new and better equipment as it is developed.

RAPID CONCENTRATION, equally rapid dispersal and increased action during periods of reduced visibility characterize the new division.

Manpower will be cut by thousands in the Army's tactical units, but the Army stressed that "three offsetting factors will militate against a net saving in the theater of operations."

First, it will be necessary to include some units, extracted from the division to keep it "lean," at Corps and Army levels, particularly antiaircraft and armor support.

Second, new weapons of increasing complexity will create the need for new types of support units.

Third, the greater dispersion essential for atomic battle will demand additional personnel for small, scattered supply installations.

Here are details as to how the Infantry, Armored and Airborne Divisions will be organized in the "Pentomic" concept:

Infantry Division

Strength will drop from 17,460 to 13,748, organized into five battle groups, each an administratively self-contained unit.

In addition to the Commanding General and his Staff, Division Headquarters will include Military Police and an alternate headquarters with a staff for the Assistant Division Commander.

During battle, the ADC will command a segment of the division consisting of two or more battle groups.

Each battle group will broaden the span of control by providing a suitable headquarters, an assault gun platoon of 90mm. self-propelled weapons and a reconnaissance element of light tanks, armored personnel carriers and mortars, as well as rifle companies and a 105mm. mortar battery.

A tank battalion will be maintained in the division, organized to provide for attachment of tanks to each of the battle groups or to be employed as an entity under division control.

A reconnaissance battalion replaces the present reconnaissance company, and will be responsible for target acquisition—increasingly important with longer-range, heavier-yield weapons.

The signal unit will be enlarged over the current signal company. The engineer battalion will be capable of providing elements for the battle groups as necessary.

DIVISION ARTILLERY will be strengthened, with each division containing one battalion of 105mm. howitzers and a composite battalion of 8-inch howitzers, Honest John rockets and two 155mm. batteries.

Division trains will be utilized to provide all normal logistical elements and such new units as the administrative services company, aviation company and a transportation battalion.

In addition to reconnaissance and fire control missions, the division aircraft will be capable of a small tactical emergency airlift for medical evacuation, combat resupply and combat patrol operations.

The Administrative Services Company includes the Adjutant General, Inspector General, Judge Advocate General and other administrative staff elements, and is also responsible for functions previously performed by a replacement company.

THE TRANSPORTATION BATTALION—an entirely new concept—incorporates an armored personnel carrier capacity which provides a simultaneous lift for swift movement of one battle group. It will also be used for tactical resupply. The battalion's truck company will provide the main logistical lift of the division.

the wisdom and the leadership of General Ramey and U.S. Air Force leaders of similar backgrounds.

This high order of immaculate, impersonal objectivity is normal among the leaders of the administration and is normal among the thinking people of Japan. This I have seen.

sion and will provide a means for troop movement.

Although division strength is cut by 3700, the Infantry elements which engage the enemy directly have been increased by about 450 soldiers.

Tank strength is reduced slightly, but anti-tank weapons have been bolstered. The Army says that a "sharp increase" in armored personnel carriers will offset reduction in wheeled vehicles.

Armored Division

Strength will be cut from 14,670 to 14,670—hardly a change—but aircraft and flying and maintenance personnel will be strengthened to improve target acquisition capabilities. Similarly, the division signal unit will be increased and expanded into a battalion.

Armored division artillery will include one battery of 8-inch howitzers and an Honest John rocket battery, while retaining its current light artillery formation. There will be a small reduction in medium artillery.

The number of combat vehicles will be increased, as will the number of rifles, BAR's and machine guns.

The Army noted that "because of its separate battalion organization, armor-protected mobility and a favorable manpower-to-firepower ratio, the Armored Division is currently well suited for the fast-moving, dispersed type warfare envisioned for the future."

Airborne Division

The essential difference between the new and old airborne divisions is that the "Pentomic" unit will be completely air-transportable, using only one half of the lift required for the old-type division.

Strength will drop from 17,085 to 14,486, with five battle groups, each including a headquarters company, a mortar battery and five rifle companies.

Major reorganization of artillery provides an Honest John battery and five batteries of 105mm. howitzers.

A new command and control battalion administers the headquarters company, administrative services company, aviation company and the reconnaissance troop, which has both an air and ground reconnaissance capability and contains the division's target acquisition unit.

The signal unit will be expanded and modernized to control five combat groups through the incorporation of an area type communications system.

A SUPPORT COMMAND provides logistical support on a functional basis. It will include a headquarters company which has a band and security platoon, a maintenance battalion, medical battalion, supply and transportation company and a parachute supply company.

The Army said of the new Airborne Division: "The Infantry assault element of the new division is slightly larger than that of the conventional airborne division, while its heavy equipment has been reduced. Tanks have been eliminated, this loss being offset in part by an increase in anti-tank weapons."

"Conventional artillery has been reduced, but an atomic capability has been added. Medium mortar strength has been reduced slightly, but heavy mortars have been increased. Machine guns have been increased in numbers, particularly in front-line echelons."

Navy Boards Pick 1,621 Reserve Cpts. & Cdrs.

President Eisenhower has approved the selection of 299 officers for advancement to the rank of captain and 1,322 for the rank of commander.

All selectees are inactive duty Reservists.

The board, which met on 15 January to consider Line officers, chose 1,113 (including 10 women) for three-stripe rank and 155 for captain's rank.

The 19 February board, which reviewed the records of Staff Corps officers, picked:

To Captain—Civil Engineer Corps, seven; Supply Corps, 15; Dental Corps, 401 and Medical Corps, 82.

To Commander—Civil Engineer Corps, 30; Chaplain Corps, 12; Supply Corps, 72 (including two women); Dental Corps, 30; Medical Corps, 29 (including one woman); and Nurse Corps, three.

Pay Can Spur Defense, Cordiner Says

From first page—

General Electric Company, fired this specific forecast:

If Congress votes a modernized pay structure this year, to go into effect on 1 January 1958, the cost can be financed completely from current budget estimates.

How much could be saved by a new pay plan? Mr. Cordiner was asked.

He said that within five years—probably less—savings of up to $5 billion are possible.

How will the pay plan affect combat potentials?

Chairman Cordiner maintained that at the present level of expenditures the "pay for merit" concept would boost striking potential by 15 per cent.

Could adoption of the pay plan result in a cut of military manpower up to 200,000 men without loss of present effectiveness?

The Chairman's answer was direct: "Positively yes," he asserted.

How about the draft?

Mr. Cordiner predicted that by increasing the attractiveness of career military service, the need for use of Selective Service will be reduced, possibly even eliminated.

Hammering hard at the contention that a military pay adjustment would counter, not contribute, to an inflationary trend, the industrialist leader told newsmen:

"This country has a major opportunity to begin cutting the cost of defense, the largest single item in the Federal budget, by instituting a modern system of manpower management and compensation in the Armed Forces."

Forecasting the possibility of saving $28 billion by fiscal '60, $4.1 billion by fiscal '61 and $5,082,000,000 by fiscal '62, or earlier, Mr. Cordiner said:

"Savings of this magnitude in the National Defense—the largest and most intractable element of the Federal budget—present a target worth going after. . . . We must begin somewhere to halt and reverse the inflationary trend toward ever higher costs of government, and here, for a small initial investment, is a very promising place to start."

THE INITIAL INVESTMENT, he explained, would be a six-month fiscal '58 outlay of $249 million, which the Service Secretaries are willing to finance from pending budget requests.

The full year cost for fiscal '59 is estimated at $316 million.

After that, there would be net savings which run to hundreds of millions of dollars.

Chairman Cordiner, questioned about the cost figures, conceded that these may be reduced because of the likelihood that the Defense Department, the Administration and Congress will make revisions in Committee recommendations, particularly with regard to timing.

He said he was realistic enough to anticipate that some of the pay adjustments proposed by the Committee will be scaled downward, notably the suggestion for a top pay of $24,000 a year.

Chairman Cordiner and his associates made it plain, however, that they stand behind the validity of their recommendations. He said he was pleased that Secretary Wilson has "bought the philosophy of our approach."

Sources close to Secretary Wilson report that he intends to fight vigorously for the Cordiner plan, modified as necessary, during the remainder of his Pentagon service.

Late last year, Secretary Wilson briefed the President on the general outlines of this ideas concerning military pay, which are in agreement with the Cordiner Plan.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER is reportedly reliably to have given Secretary Wilson strong encouragement.

Subsequently, however, there have been reports that the President is being subjected to strong warnings by persons outside the Defense Department that it would be untimely to endorse a military pay plan when efforts are being made to check inflation and reduce spending.

These critics have labelled the Cordiner Plan as a "pay raise."

Chairman Cordiner obviously aware of these attacks confronted the issue squarely at his news conference this week.

He said: "Reports on the work of the Committee have already appeared in the press, and most of these reports were reasonably accurate as of the date that they were published."

"However, these reports were published before the Committee had completed studies of the cost-and-gains effects of its recommendations."

"Therefore," continued Chairman Cordiner, "because of inadequate information, many people have been led to believe that the Committee's recommendations are nothing more than a general pay raise for military personnel, adding still more to the oppressive costs of National Defense and to the current forces of inflation."

"Nothing could be farther from the truth," he asserted, "and nothing could be farther from the objectives of the Committee. Our recommendation contemplates savings and deflationary influence."

THE OUTLOOK: Chairman Cordiner's hard-hitting presentation, coupled with Secretary Wilson's expressed determination to seek revision of out-moded pay scales assures the Services that the pay plan will not be easily pigeon-holed. Momentum has been developed for a full-scale effort. The Budget Bureau has a pay bill in its hands and Congress is on notice that Secretary Wilson wants action as quickly as possible.

What will be crucial is the position President Eisenhower takes.

This likely will become known shortly, either through Budget Bureau reaction to Secretary Wilson's pay bill, or by a direct statement from the Chief Executive—possibly at his next news conference.

Approve Pentagon Leaders

The Senate has confirmed the appointment of Under Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, Jr., to be Secretary of the Navy, and Mr. William Howard Francis, Jr., of Texas, to be Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve.

Secretary Gates will take over his new duties on 1 April, succeeding Secretary Charles S. Thomas, whose resignation becomes effective on that date.

The Pentagon was uncertain of the date on which Secretary Francis will be sworn in.

Gen. Twining Takes JCS Chair; Sec. Quarles Goes To New Post; White & Douglas Move Up

President Eisenhower acted this week to reshuffle the Pentagon high command.

As a result, the Air Force for the first time will take over Chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The President named General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, Air Force Chief of Staff, to succeed Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, as JCS Chairman. Admiral Radford's tour ends in mid-August.

The present JCS Chairman has not announced whether he plans to retire or request another assignment. He will not reach the mandatory retirement age (62) until February of next year.

President Eisenhower also sent to the Senate the nominations of Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles to be Deputy Secretary of Defense. He will succeed Deputy Secretary Reuben B. Robertson, Jr., who has resigned.

General Thomas D. White, USAF, Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, was nominated to succeed General Twining, and Under Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas was named to succeed Secretary Quarles.

The President also reappointed Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, USN, to continue as Chief of Naval Operations for another two-year term.

Most of the appointments previously had been predicted in THE JOURNAL (2 Feb.).

West Point Marks 155th Anniversary

The men of West Point, imbued with the traditions of the U. S. Military Academy which was founded 155 years ago, will continue to carry on the spirit born here as long as there is an American. Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, USA-Ret., Class of 1913, told members of the Association of Graduates and the Corps of Cadets at the Founders' Day dinner at Washington Hall, West Point.

General Crittenger, president of the association, addressed the 2,000 present, reminding them that in this age of thermo-nuclear weapons and technology, the weapons are only as good as the individuals who man them.

General Crittenger was presented by the toastmaster Col. E. R. Heiberg, Class of 1926, who also introduced Maj. Gen. Garrison Davidson, Superintendent of the Academy.

A few words of advice were extended by Maj. Gen. Henry C. Hodges, USA-Ret. '97, Class of 1881, oldest living West Point graduate, of Stamford, Conn.

The West Point Glee Club sang several traditional songs of the Academy during the dinner, closing with The Corps.

Cadet First Cap. William T. Huckabee III, Class of 1957, spoke on behalf of the Corps.

Combat Development Chief

New chief of the Combat Development Department at the U. S. Army Electronic Proving Ground, Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., is Col. Walter A. Simpson, USA. He had commanded the 5th Signal Group at Huachuca.

Senate OKs 3-Stars For Ogden, Davidson; Confirms 101 General Officer Promotions

The Senate this week approved three-star rank for Maj. Gen. David A. D. Ogden, USA, Inspector General of the Army, and Maj. Gen. Garrison Holt Davidson, USA, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy.

The nomination of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, USA, for permanent promotion to his present rank and temporary promotion to major general was held over at the request of Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex). Senator Johnson said his action resulted from an objection by Senator Joseph McCarthy (R-Wisc).

All other Army general officer nominations were confirmed. They include 20 officers for permanent promotion to the rank of major general, 12 for temporary major general, 48 for permanent brigadier general and 21 for temporary brigadier general. Twenty USAR and National Guard officers were confirmed for promotion to major general and brigadier general.

Army Majors Face '58 "Best Qualified" Test

Army Tries to Cut VIP

Ceremonies to Minimum

Ceremonial honors for visiting VIPs at Army installations will be cut to a minimum to promote economy and efficiency.

Generally, according to AR 600-25, full honors will be reserved for statutory appointees and generals or flag officers, foreign dignitaries, and for occasions when ceremonies promote international goodwill.

Department of the Army officials have been requested to decline ceremonies unless for compelling reasons they are desirable. Field Commanders have been instructed to comply with such requests unless special local circumstances indicate that ceremonies should be rendered.

Logistics Jackpot

Steel girders—wooden beams—cable and wire reels—railroad ties and track—delicate electronic equipment—these are typical C-123 loads on any logistics mission.

Jet engines, food, medicine and hospital supplies by the ton—these make up the bulk of C-123 cargoes.

These versatile transports can move entire divisions—at the rate of up to sixty men or eight tons of cargo per plane. Big loads do not mean hard surfaced runways—the C-123's assault transport characteristics turn narrow clearings and furrowed fields into landing areas.

Reliability—versatility—performance... these C-123 qualities are typical of the Fairchild design and production philosophy.

Cdr. Cox Flies A3D-1 To 2 Speed Records

A Navy Douglas A3D-1 "Skywarrior," piloted by Cdr. Dale W. Cox, Jr., USN, has established two new transcontinental speed records.

Commander Cox, Project Pilot for AROWA (Applied Research Operational Weather Analysis), Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md., completed a round trip, Los Angeles-New York flight in a total elapsed time of 9 hours, 35 minutes, 48 seconds.

This slashed 1 hour and 45 minutes off the existing cross-country round trip mark, and bettered the East-West cross-country record by 10 minutes.

Both of the records which Commander Cox topped had been held by Lt. John M. Conroy, USANG, who flew a North American F-86 "Sabre Jet" on 21-22 May 1955.

The West-East record is held by Lt. Col. Robert Scott, USAF, who made the flight in a Republic F-84-F "Thunderstreak" on 9 March 1955.

Commander Cox's co-pilot and navigator was Lt. Russell Baum, USN, Third member of the crew was T/Sgt. Robert L. Butts, USMC, who served as plane captain. They too are stationed at NATC Patuxent River.

The Douglas-built AD3-1 twin-jet attack bomber left Los Angeles International Airport at 9:11:51.2 A. M. (PST) and arrived at Floyd Bennett Field, New York, at 1:11:06.4 P. M. (PST), a total of 2,445.9 statute miles in 3 hours, 59 minutes, and 15.2 seconds.

This was 15 minutes and 1.4 seconds short of Colonel Scott's mark.

Following a 21 minute refueling stop at Floyd Bennett Field, the "Skywarrior" was airborne at 1:32:41.4 P. M. (PST), and reached Los Angeles at 6:47:39.2 P. M., a total round trip distance of 4,891.8 miles.

This clipped 10 minutes off the old mark set by Lieutenant Conroy who made the trip in 5 hours, 24 minutes, and 26 seconds.

The 70,000-pound A3D-1 joined the fleet on 30 March 1956. The plane is in the 600-700 mile-an-hour class and flies at altitudes up to 40,000 feet. It was produced for the Navy by the Douglas El Segundo, Calif., division.

Commander Cox soon will be transferred to VX-5 (an experimental flight test squadron) based at the China Lake, Naval Air Facility.

He is married to the former Patricia Broadway of Pasadena, Calif. The Cox's make their home with their three sons at 1035 Madison Avenue, Pasadena, Calif.

The record-breaking flight was made 21 March.

Sub Killer

CYCLONE 9s add to the striking power of Royal Canadian Navy's GRUMMAN CS2F-1

A highly effective sub-hunter, the new De Havilland-built Grumman CS2F-1—serving the Naval Air Branch of the Royal Canadian Navy—is a deadly sub-killer too. Using radar to detect and track subs on the surface, and magnetic airborne detection (MAD) to zero on submerged craft, the CS2F-1 patrols the seas off Canada with an arsenal of torpedoes, depth charges and mines.

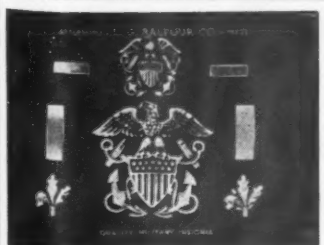

Every bit as important as the firepower of this new tracker is its engine power—twin Cyclone 9s by Curtiss-Wright. These modern powerplants, with the longest service background of any aircraft engine type, give the Grumman CS2F-1 its far-reaching overwater capabilities, its hour-after-hour dependability, its fuel economy for maximum patrol endurance and range.

Sub-detection is a vital part of a chain-reaction "offshore patrol" that day and night guards North America, and whose perimeter extends from the Arctic Ocean south around the entire continent. Everywhere in this protective network Curtiss-Wright power plays a leading role.

1611th ATW Marks 2d Year At McGuire;
Takes 25,000 Across Ocean Monthly

McGuire Air Force Base, N. J., the Military Air Transport Service's largest east-coast port of aerial embarkation, will mark its second year of MATS overseas flight operations on 1 April.

McGuire has been a MATS base since

July 1, 1954. On that date, the 1611th Air Transport Wing (M) assumed jurisdiction of the base from the 568th Fighter Interceptor Group, Air Defense Command. Since the beginning of flight operations at the base two years ago, the Wing, commanded continuously by Brig. Gen. George B. Dany, USAF, has steadily increased its monthly number of passengers flown to and from overseas bases located in the vast area extending from Saudi Arabia to Greenland. Present monthly transit figures reflect about 25,000 passengers, 800 patients, and 450,000 pounds of cargo and mail.

The 1611th Air Transport Wing is part of MATS' Atlantic Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Emery S. Wetzel, USAF. In general, the Wing's mission is the aerial transportation of passengers, patients, mail, strategic materials, and other cargoes, subject to priorities and policies established by higher headquarters.

The passenger and cargo load assigned to the Wing is divided between one Navy and five Air Force squadrons—the 18th, 29th, 30th, 38th and 58th Air Transport Squadrons and Naval Air Transport Squadron Six. The squadrons all are equipped with Douglas C-118 four-engine Liftmaster aircraft (Air Force version of the DC-6B), which operates at approximately 20,000 feet. The Navy version of this aircraft is designated the R6D.

An example of the constant emphasis on passenger service is the new pilot program for the overseas movement of unaccompanied officers, warrant officers and seven-level airmen. The program, extending on a test basis for 90 days from 1 Jan. has been initiated in an effort to materially reduce the in-transit time of overseas replacements from approximately five days at personnel processing groups to a minimum of two hours at the Port of Aerial Embarkation.

On 26 Nov. of last year, two C-118's of the 1611th Air Transport Wing broke the Atlantic Division's non-stop crossing record between McGuire and Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany. The first Liftmaster, assigned to the 18th Air Transport Squadron and commanded by Maj. Charles S. Selge, was over station at Rhein-Main 11 hours and one minute after taking off from McGuire. Shortly afterwards, the second aircraft, commanded by Maj. Thomas L. Twyford of the 58th Air Transport Squadron, broke the record just established by completing the flight over the same route in 10 hours, 59 minutes.

A dramatic highlight of the Wing's operations during last December and January was its contribution to Operation "Safe Haven," the Military Air Transport Service's massive Hungarian refugee airlift. The operation brought a total of 9,700 escapees to the United States in 22 days. Gen. Dany served as Task Force Commander. During December the Wing performed 70 "Safe Haven" trips, while also carrying on its normal passenger traffic.

Named in honor of Maj. Thomas B. McGuire, Jr., a New Jersey fighter pilot who lost his life in the service of his country on 7 Jan. 1945, the base is commanded by Col. Lloyd R. Humphreys. Col. C. O. Williams, Jr., is commander of the 1611th Air Transport Group, and Col. Max E. Van Benthuyzen commands the 1611th Maintenance Group.

MATS Shifts Squadron
From Hickam To Travis

The 47th Air Transport Squadron of MATS will be moved from Hickam AFB, Honolulu, T.H. to Travis AFB, Fairfield, Calif.

The movement, involving almost 500 Air Force personnel and 64 civilians, will be completed by 1 July. The 47th which is a C-97 "Stratocruiser" Squadron, will join other MATS squadrons already based at Travis which utilize this type of aircraft.

This is the second major move that MATS has made from Hickam within the past year. Last November, the Pacific Division Headquarters of MATS was moved to Parks AFB, Pleasanton, Calif., from Honolulu.

The movement will leave the 1502nd Air Transport Wing, the 1502nd Air Transport Group, two Air Force Heavy Transport Squadrons, and two MATS naval squadrons still operating out of Hickam.

Col. Moomaw to 63d TCW

Col. Chester C. Moomaw, USAF, new Executive Officer of the 63d Troop Carrier Wing, Donaldson AFB, S. C., has arrived to assume his new duties.

Colonel Moomaw goes to the 63d from Europe where he was Deputy for Operations of the 322d Air Division, Combat Cargo, the airlift organizations for USAF and NATO. During the recent Middle East Crisis, Colonel Moomaw was Senior Air Force Liaison Officer with the U. S. Navy Command at Naples, Italy in charge of the movement of U. N. Police forces into the Suez area.

GU, Then Iran

Maj. Lorenzo Caliendo, USAF, former commander of the 42d Field Maintenance Squadron, Loring AFB, Me., will attend special schooling at Georgetown University in Washington, D. C., prior to his new assignment at the American Embassy in Iran as Air Attache.

He will be succeeded by Lt. Col. Lawrence W. Schrader, USAF, former Aircraft Maintenance Staff Officer of the 70th Bomb Squadron. In addition to his Field Maintenance command, Major Caliendo also formerly commanded the 42d Operations Squadron, and had been Director of Safety and Director of Operations for Air Base Group during his three-year stay at Loring.

SERVES ON LEAVE

Maj. William R. Campbell, USAF, commander of Detachment 10, 4670th Ground Observer Squadron at Manchester, N. H., recently gave up his 15-day leave to head the local March of Dimes campaign.

He had a twofold reason for giving his best efforts to the drive: His two sons had polio in 1950. One recovered fully through therapy provided by March of Dimes funds. The other still uses crutches and a brace.

Pay to Have Backing. There seemed little doubt this week but that the plan for the revision of the Service pay system will be supported vigorously in those sources from which its initial push must come. The Secretary of Defense is represented not only as strongly in favor of the new plan but as prepared to go to the Commander-in-Chief for the backing he will need to give it a strong impetus in Congress. Mr. Wilson already has put the Armed Services Committees on notice that the measure is coming before them for consideration.

Mr. Ralph J. Cordiner, chairman of the Committee which drafted the plan, also showed in his away-from-the-Pentagon press conference that he and his committee are thoroughly convinced of the soundness of the plan not only from the standpoint of the Services themselves, but from the larger outlook of National economics and long-range defense. Furthermore he demonstrated an intimate knowledge and enthusiasm for his subject that is bound to be impressive to the Committees of Congress before whom he will be called to testify. Fortunately the members of the Committee which formulated the plan represent a civilian and particularly experienced industrial and business viewpoint.

Though the outlook is reasonably bright there are some deterrent factors. For one thing, there seems to be a general acceptance now that the final results will represent a watered-down version of the original plan. Both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Cordiner appear to accept in advance that the carefully calculated and documented increases will suffer appreciable cut-backs in running the gantlet through the Department, the Bureau of the Budget, and Congress. We believe this retreat-in-advance to be tactically unsound and unwarranted. Secondly, there is the danger that Congress will insist on making now the savings in the defense budget which Mr. Cordiner says can not "be achieved overnight." Congress, in its eagerness to justify a stiff cut in over-all defense appropriations, may well blame such a move on the forecasted savings. This could endanger both programs.

The benefits from the Cordiner proposals offer so much to the Services and to the nation's future security that Congress can well afford to weigh them carefully and legislate accordingly.

Attack on Exchanges. The House Armed Services Committee has set 3 April as the opening of hearings on the Department of Defense's request to liberalize and make more realistic the list of items which the exchanges may supply to Services families. Fortunately the Department of Defense has designated Maj. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, USAF, Chief of the Army-Air Force Exchange Service, as its representative at the forthcoming hearings. General Parks has had some experience in these matters and is not one to be bullied by opposition.

The record of the Exchange Service is so clean over so long a period that it is difficult to see how there can be opposition to its continuation. Yet this is really the basis of those retail organizations which are against the new proposals. If the Exchanges are justified in their present operation, then the amendments now suggested are equally justified.

One can not escape the conclusion that the retail associations which are opposing the exchanges fulfilling the wants of Service families are opposing the exchanges in principle. What they really want is to do away with the exchanges entirely and force the Service families to travel away from their posts, stations, and bases to buy their necessities from retail stores at civilian

Assn. Fires a Salvo

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Those of us in the Army who have been waiting since December for a forthright reply to Secretary Wilson's 200-mile missile decision finally got it. Your reporting of the Association of the U. S. Army's statement on "Roles and Missions" (THE JOURNAL 23 March) shows that at last the Army is going to get some "grass roots" support.

I'm sure that we have taken our role too much for granted and have not succeeded in getting across our viewpoint to the American public. It looks now as if that situation might change. Let's hope so. Let's hope the Association won't stop firing its guns when it thinks that poor decisions have been made.

ENCOURAGED MAJOR

"Medical Pay"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

On 1 May, 1956, the so-called Medical-Dental Corps Incentive Act became law. The purpose of this act was to provide incentive for retention in the Regular Army of Medical and Dental Corps Officers. This was to be accomplished by increasing "Medical Pay" from the previous $100.00 per month to $250.00 per month for Medical and Dental Corps officers with over ten (10) years active service as a professional officer.

According to all reports this law did, in effect, accomplish its mission. From the first of May to the end of December 1956 the losses of Medical Corps officers dropped to an insignificant number; and for the first time in years the Medical Corps gains for that period far outnumbered the losses.

We now have the proposals of the Cordiner Committee which will, in effect, negate a large portion of the above mentioned gains. This is to be brought about by a REDUCTION of the Medical Pay for officers above the grade of Majors—Lieutenant Colonels reduced to $150.00 per month and Colonels to $100.00 per month.

If one compares the present pay with the Cordiner proposals (including incentives) for officers of equal time-in-grade and rank, one being a Medical Corps officer and the other his line contemporary, one will note that:

a. In Colonels with over 30 years service for pay purposes, the line officer will receive an increase of $268.80, while the Medical Corps officer will receive an increase of $118.80. The Medical Corps increase will be $150.00 per month LESS than the line increase.

b. In Lieutenant Colonels with over 26 years service for pay purposes, the line officer will receive an increase of $169.20, while the Medical Corps officer will receive an increase of $69.20. Again, the increase for the MC is $100.00 LESS than the increase for the line.

c. In Majors with over 18 years service for pay purposes, the line officer will receive an increase of $68.40, while the Medical Corps officer will receive an increase of $28.40. Here the MC increase is $40.00 LESS than his line contemporary.

If the purpose of the Incentive Act of last May was to retain Medical Corps officers in the Regular Army, the Cordiner proposals certainly are aimed to increase the Medical Corps losses of the Regular Army.

The more equitable thing would be to retain the present "Medical Pay" provisions and give all officers, regardless of Branch of Service, the same increases proposed by the Cordiner Committee. To do otherwise will, I am certain, bring about an exodus of the well-trained, highly valuable Medical Corps officers with from 15 to 25 years service.

INTERESTED

Stripes on Trousers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I suggest the Colonel who feels that "stripes on trousers do not seem appropriate for mature men" (9 March issue) do a little research on uniforms worn by some very mature men in the history of the profession of arms. Further, while West Point Cadets may be youngsters they were wearing stripes on their trousers before the high school cadets with whom the Colonel likens them and they were doing so in emulation of the professional military leaders serving in the United States Army at the time the Academy was founded.

I, for one, am extremely pleased that the Uniform Board has seen fit to give the professional officer a uniform which makes him look as much like a professional officer as is possible during this period of emphasis on "the new look." It most likely will encourage many officers to perform more in the manner of professionals.

New Cavalry Regiments

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In the article pertaining to the addition of the 16th and 17th Cavalry Regiments to the Pentomic Army it was stated that no new cavalry regiments were formed after 1916. This I believe to be in error. The 18th through 25th Cavalry Regiments were formed in 1917 and 1918; the 27th Cavalry Regiment was formed in North Africa in 1943, deactivated, reactivated, and again deactivated the same year. While it is true that the 18th through 25th Cavalry were redesignated the 76th through 83rd Field Artillery within six months of activation, none the less, they did exist on the Army rolls.

little or no price differential from retail stores. What they do provide is a convenient place for Service families to do their necessary day-to-day shopping. What small profits there are go to help the recreational fund, to provide sports equipment and small supplementary needs for the enlisted personnel. It is no more, in fact not as much as many private businesses provide in cooperative stores for their own employees.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (29 March 1947)—General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, told the National Press Club that "we must at all times have an Air Force—a decent Air Force—in being." The General, who was guest of honor at a luncheon of the Club, declared "The War Department believes that the Air Force has proved it occupies a dominant position in war. We believe the Air Force represents the only immediate weapon available for retaliatory action if we are attacked."

50 Years Ago (30 March 1907)—The Taft Presidential boom is sweeping over Ohio like prairie fire, and there no longer seems to be any doubt in the minds of politicians that Mr. Taft will be endorsed for the Presidency at the Republican State Convention next year.

90 Years Ago (30 March 1867)—The most sensational event of the week was the fight in the House between Messrs. Butler and Bingham. The former named his charge against the latter about hanging Mrs. Surratt, and in the course of his remarks referred to Booth's suppressed diary, which was now with the House Judiciary Committee, with eighteen pages mutilated or missing, and intimated that Mr. Bingham had, as Judge-Advocate, withheld at the trial most important evidence which was contained in the diary and further, that he was a party to the mutilation of the diary.

DoD Gives Army Aviation New Charter Replacing Agreement With USAF

FOLLOWING is the full text of the new Department of Defense Directive (No. 5160.22) clarifying roles and missions of the Army and Air Force as they pertain to the Army's own integral aviation.

The Directive lists three references: (a) The 1952 Memorandum of Understanding between the Army and the Air Force, which it cancels; (b) DoD Directive 5100.1 "Functions of the Armed Forces and the Joint Chiefs of Staff"; and (c) the Secretary of Defense's Memorandum of 26 Nov. 1956 on roles and missions.

The full text of the new Directive follows:

I. AUTHORITY AND PURPOSE

Pursuant to the authority contained in the National Security Act of 1947, as amended, and in consonance with reference (b), this directive is issued for the purpose of:

1. Defining the scope of the U. S. Army aviation program and establishment.
2. Insuring that the U. S. Army may employ aircraft necessary for its internal requirements in the conduct of operations on land, without duplicating the functions assigned to the U. S. Air Force.
3. Stressing and clarifying the responsibilities of the U. S. Air Force with regard to providing aviation support for the U. S. Army.

II. DEFINITION

For purposes of this directive, the combat zone is defined as extending not more than 100 miles forward of the general line of contact between U. S. and enemy ground forces. Its extension to the rear of the general line of contact will be designated by the appropriate field commander, and normally extends back of the front lines about 100 miles.

III. POLICY AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. General

As stated in reference (b), the U. S. Air Force includes among its primary responsibilities those of furnishing close combat and logistical air support for the U. S. Army. These responsibilities are continuing in nature, from the immediate outset and throughout the course of all combat operations, and for peacetime training. While the extent of such support, by nature, is not readily susceptible of specific delimitation, it must at all times meet the reasonable requirements specified by the U. S. Army, either for combat operations or for training, and the U. S. Air Force shall be prepared to devote an appreciable portion of its resources to such support and to the establishment and organization which may be required therefor.

U. S. Air Force

Consistent with its assigned function of furnishing logistical air support to the U. S. Army, the U. S. Air Force will, as required, provide the following:

- a. Airlift of Army supplies, equipment, personnel and units from exterior points to points within the Army combat zone.
- b. Airlift for the evacuation of personnel and materiel from the Army combat zone.
- c. Airlift for the air movement of troops, supplies, and equipment in the initial and subsequent phases of airborne operations.
- d. Aeromedical evacuation from Air Force operating locations within the combat zone through Air Force casualty staging units to hospital facilities outside the combat zone; and the aeromedical evacuation from an airfield or an airborne objective area where airborne operation includes air landed logistical support by the Air Force.

U. S. Army

The U. S. Army Aviation Program will consist of those types of aircraft required to carry out the following Army functions envisaged within the combat zone and shall be used by the Army exclusively as a basis for developing Army requirements for aircraft and for the normal employment of Army Aviation. The capability of operation from unimproved fields should be adopted as a basic objective for the development of Army Aviation. This capability is essential to the quality of responsiveness, and responsiveness is a quality essential to that aviation day-to-day operations must be intimately coordinated with the actions of the forces. Army organic aircraft will be used by the responsible Army commander when he considers necessary for the discharge of his military mission.

Command, liaison, courier and communications.—This includes aerial wire-laying and aviation to assist in the direction, coordination and control of Army forces in the field.

Observation, visual and photographic reconnaissance, fire adjustment and topographical survey.—This includes aerial obser-

Knox, Ky., is shown hovering above the ground in a Hiller YH 32 ram jet helicopter with Mr. Richard Followill, civilian test pilot, at the Army Aviation Board. General King, who will become Assistant Commandant of the Armor School early in the Summer, was at Fort Rucker for orientation on Army Aviation. vation to amplify and supplement other Army methods of observation for the purpose of locating, verifying and evaluating targets, adjusting fire, terrain study, or obtaining information on enemy forces, complementing that obtained by air reconnaissance agencies of the other Services; this includes limited aerial photography incident to these purposes.

c. Airlift of Army personnel and material.—Transportation of Army supplies, equipment, personnel, and small units within the Army combat zone in the course of combat and logistical operation. Includes the movement of small units to execute small-scale air-landed operations, the movement of reserves, and the shifting or relocation of small units and individuals within the combat zone as the situation may dictate. Includes expeditious movement of critically needed supplies or equipment, or both, within the combat zone, supplementing the ground transportation system operating within the field army. Does not include the execution of joint airborne operations.

d. Aeromedical evacuation.—Aeromedical evacuation within the Army combat zone to include battlefield pickup of casualties (except those from an airfield or airborne objective area which is supported by Air Force air-landed logistical support), air transport to initial point of treatment and any subsequent moves to hospital facilities within the Army combat zone.

B. Limitations

The U. S. Army Aircraft Program, carrying out the functions set forth in A above, will be subject to the following limitations:

1. Fixed wing aircraft, convertiplanes, and vertical/short take-off and landing aircraft will have an empty weight not to exceed 5,000 pounds. Rotary wing aircraft will have an empty weight not to exceed 20,000 pounds. Specific exceptions to weight limitations for specific aircraft for specific purposes may be granted by the Secretary of Defense after consideration of U. S. Army requirements and appropriate U. S. Air Force functions and capabilities.

2. The provision of a limited airlift capability within the U. S. Army Aviation Program shall not serve as a basis for increasing or decreasing U. S. Air Force forces necessary to support or protect the U. S. Army airlift forces. Provisions of this limited airlift capability will apply only to small combat units and limited quantities of materiel to improve local mobility, and not the provision of an airlift capability sufficient for the large-scale movement of sizable U. S. Army combat units which would duplicate the mission of the U. S. Air Force.

3. As limited Army aviation airlift capability becomes available to active Army forces, provision should be made for compensating reductions in other forms of Army transportation designed to operate within the combat zone.

4. The U. S. Army Aviation Program will not provide for aircraft to perform the following functions:

- a. Strategic and tactical airlift, as outlined in Section III, Subparagraphs A.1.a. through d., above.
- b. Tactical reconnaissance.
- c. Interdiction of the battlefield.
- d. Close combat air support.

5. The U. S. Army will not maintain unilateral aviation research facilities, but will confine itself to development and determination of specific requirements peculiar to Army needs, to evaluation of proposals, and to user testing of equipment. The U. S. Army will make maximum use of U. S. Air Force and U. S. Navy aircraft research and development facilities. The U. S. Air Force and the U. S. Navy will be responsive to U. S. Army needs in such research activities on a reimbursable basis.

6. The U. S. Army will use existing types of U. S. Navy, U. S. Air Force or civilian aircraft when they are suitable, or may be suitably modified, to meet Army requirements, rather than attempt to develop and procure new types.

C. Army aircraft may, as required by the U. S. Army, be employed in peacetime operations and in training for the functions outlined above.

IV. INTERPRETATION

Nothing contained in this directive is intended to, nor shall be construed as modifying, altering, or rescinding any of the assigned functions of the Armed Forces; it provides a clarification and interpretation of the roles and missions of the armed services, necessitated by the development of new weapons and of new strategic concepts.

V. RESCISSION AND EFFECTIVE DATE

This directive is effective immediately. Reference (a) is hereby superseded.

VI. ACTION REQUIRED

The Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Air Force will take appropriate action to insure that the provisions of this directive are fully implemented within their respective Departments.

Start Modernization Of Army L-23 Planes

Early models of the Army L-23 command transport will be returned to the Beech Aircraft Corporation factory in Wichita, Kans., and remanufactured as completely new airplanes.

Under a remanufacturing program valued at approximately $1,710,000, a "large number" of Army L-23A and L-23B units will be rebuilt in the model "D" configuration—military counterpart of the 1957 Beechcraft E50 Twin-Bonanza business plane. The contract award was made by Air Materiel Command from its headquarters at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Deliveries to the Army will begin in September 1957 and extend through August of 1958. All rebuilds will be issued new aircraft serial numbers.

As Army L-23Ds, the remanufactured planes will be powered by 340 hp supercharged Lycoming engines, the same engine that powers the commercial Beechcraft E50. (Engines installed in A and B models were rated at 260 hp.) The aircraft will also be equipped with new electronics, accessories, systems, interior styling and other advanced features, including a third cabin window on each side of the fuselage.

Each airframe will be completely stripped and brought back to zero time. In every way, the rebuilt aircraft's design, performance and appearance will be comparable to the 1957 production L-23D which Beech is currently delivering to the Army under a separate $2,800,000 order.

DFC To Army Pilot

Capt. Selmer A. Sundbee, USA, who test piloted the DeLackner Aerocycle one-man helicopter for the Army was presented the Distinguished Flying Cross at a Pentagon ceremony 28 March.

Order Turbine Engines For Army H-21 Copters

A contract in excess of $2 million for General Electric T58 turboshaft engines has been received by the Company's Small Aircraft Engine Department from the Air Force's Air Materiel Command.

The T58 engines, which produce more than 1,000 horsepower each, will be for Vertol's H-21 helicopter program which is being administered by the Air Force for the Army.

In the H-21 program, two T58 engines will be installed in each helicopter as replacements for the single 1,425 horsepower reciprocating engine. The turboshaft engines are expected to more than double the ton-mile transport capability per hour of the helicopter.

The T58 engine recently made its first flight in a modified Sikorsky helicopter. It is also scheduled to power a Kaman single-rotor utility helicopter designed specifically for an aircraft gas turbine engine.

The T58 was designed and developed by General Electric's Small Aircraft Engine Department for the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics. It weighs only 325 pounds and is less than five feet long and sixteen inches in diameter.

BRIG. GEN. WILLIAM B. BUNKER, USA, (left), commanding general, Army Transportation Supply and Maintenance Command, looks over airstrip site at Atlanta General Depot with Col. B. C. McKee, USA, Depot Transportation Supply Officer. The proposed landing strip is to be utilized in carrying out the Depot's new mission of supply and maintenance of all Army aircraft in the Third Army area.

Army Will Shift Five Brig. Generals

Brig. Gen. James P. Hannigan, USA, Headquarters, 1st Armored Division, Ft. Polk, La., has been assigned to Headquarters, U. S. Army Forces, Far East, in June.

Brig. Gen. John E. Leary, USA, Chief of Staff, Korean Military Advisory Group, has been assigned to Headquarters, 3d Infantry Division, Ft. Benning, Ga., in July.

Brig. Gen. William F. Train, USA, Deputy Commandant, U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, has been assigned to Headquarters, U. S. Army Europe, in September.

Brig. Gen. Frederick R. Zierath, Assistant Division Commander, 3d Infantry Division, Ft. Benning, Ga., has been assigned to Headquarters, U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, for duty with the staff and faculty. He will report to his new post in July.

Brig. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen, USA, Assistant Division Commander, 10th Infantry Division, U. S. Army, Europe, has been assigned to Headquarters, U. S. Army Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., in August.

CHAIRMAN CORDINER scored a brilliant success with his out-of-the-Pentagon news conference this week in which he spelled out details of how the Nation could save $5 billion a year in defense costs, cut manpower requirements by at least 200,000 and possibly eliminate the draft—all this, for no extra outlay in the military budget. HIS FORTHRIGHT RESPONSES to questions from reporters and his willingness to express gains in specific terms—for example, a 15 per cent boost in combat effectiveness—have put the issue squarely before the Administration and Congress. A modern military pay plan spells the possibility of the single greatest area of savings in all Federal spending. THAT CLEARLY STATED FACT will be difficult to counterattack, provided that Mr. Cordiner and his associates are able to muster support from other officials, in and out of Government, who will be willing to be as explicit in stating what can be achieved by readjustments in military pay.

IMPACT OF CORDINER RECOMMENDATIONS not directly related to pay was shown this week with the Army's disclosure of a new EM promotion plan. The Army said that "it ties in with the Cordiner Committee concept of increased rank for the most productive individuals." WATCH FOR MORE STATEMENTS on personnel policy changes linked to the pay study.

BRIG. GEN. ARNO H. LUEHMANN, USAF, is seen as a top prospect for the post of AF Information Services Chief to succeed Brig. Gen. Andrew J. Kinney, USAF, who is leaving for a new assignment following almost four years of high-level assignments in Washington, including service with the National Security Council and as Executive Assistant to Sec'y Quarles. General Luehmann, who directed the nation-wide AF recruiting program since May 1954 after duty as AF Deputy Director of Information, is widely known among representatives of all news media. HIS APPOINTMENT would require no OJT (on the job) training to prepare him for the assignment as top PubInfo advisor to AF Sec'y-designate Douglas.

THE NAVY'S ATOMIC CARRIER will not be scuttled by the current economy drive, if Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee has his way. The powerful legislator says abandonment of this project would be "false economy". The A-carrier represents one-fifth of the entire Navy '58 shipbuilding program.

THE WEAPON SYSTEM EVALUATION GROUP, which has been restricted in the work it was allowed to undertake ever since its founding in 1949 by SecDef Forrestal in the wake of the B-36-Supercarrier controversy, now at last appears to be getting up steam. Assistant SecDef Newbury, in charge of Research and Engineering, intends to place greater reliance on the WSEG, says it now will tackle the mission it was set up to do: namely evaluate weapons. FIRST REAL JOB done by the WSEG in this field was a comparison study of the Army's Nike B and the Navy's Talos missile. MR. NEWBURY IS STRIVING to allay fears that DoD intends to cut back on research; he insists the opposite is the case. One plan he has in mind is to explore the possibility of the DoD awarding certain research contracts in cases where a single Service does not express an interest. He concedes this places the Defense Department "in operations." Pentagon realists would quickly agree that this would be no novelty.

A SPECIAL STAMP commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Air Force will be issued on 1 August at Washington, D. C. The Post Office Department has not yet decided upon the denomination, design or color.

THE NEW COMMANDER of the Army's Aviation Center at Ft. Rucker, Ala., Brig. Gen. Bogardus S. Cairns, USA, who succeeds Brig. Gen. Carl I. Hutton, USA, under orders to Germany, will find it easy to make pilot talk in the family. A son, Douglas Cairns, is a cadet at the USAF Academy.

THE NAME-CHANGING PHASE of the Army continues. As revealed in The Journal last week, the Atomic Support Commands henceforth are to be known as U.S. Army Missile Commands. Now, comes disclosure that the Army Antiaircraft Command at Ent AFB, Colo., under Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, USA, will be designated the U.S. Army Air Defense Command—obviously to emphasize the point that the command is designed to meet the threat of enemy missiles as well as aircraft. AN ENTHUSIASTIC ANNOUNCEMENT from the Army's Air Defense Command (there is also an Air Force Air Defense Command and a joint Continental Air Defense Command, which is certain to lead to some confusion), said this week that conventional guns still are playing an effective role as an antiaircraft weapons in the new era of guided missiles. The Army told of recent tests which showed that "antiaircraft artillery gun units have the ability to locate, engage and destroy any enemy bomber likely to be flown against the nation's defenses." THE ARMY STATEMENT ADDED: "All except the highest flying bombers—which are duck soup for NIKE guided missiles units of ARADCOM—can be destroyed by the gun units." There are NIKE skeptics who likely would question the "duck soup" reference.

A MIDDLE EAST COMMAND may be created in the wake of the Eisenhower Doctrine's approval by Congress. There's been some suggestion that such a headquarters could be maintained aboard a Navy warship, which would have available units from both the Sixth and Seventh Fleets in event of emergency.

ARMY HELICOPTERS are being used as mail trucks to service troops participating in Exercise King Cole in Louisiana. . . . Maj. Gen. Max Rich, UTAH'S ADJUTANT GENERAL, has been taking jump training with the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.; he is believed to be the first A.G. to take such a course with an RA outfit. . . . QUICK SECURITY CLEARANCE was obtained this week for a logistics announcement: the Armed Forces plans to buy 1,104,000 pounds of canned asparagus from the 1957 pack. . . . The first ARMY NATIONAL GUARD NURSE to serve on active duty, 1st Lt. Sylvia M. Law of Birmingham, Ala., is attending a six-week course at the Army Medical Service School, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.; her husband, Carol J. Law, a Warrant Officer in the Guard is a member of the Alabama House of Representatives. . . . THE AMERICAN LEGION has launched a campaign to repeal or modify Status of Forces Treaties affecting trials of U.S. military men and their families overseas; the Defense Department is satisfied that these agreements are not jeopardizing the rights of U.S. citizens, but the Legion doesn't agree.

YOU CAN PAY MORE... BUT YOU CAN'T BUY BETTER COVERAGE

No officer of the US Armed Forces would dare drive his automobile without insurance. Not only must the insurance be adequate to meet possible claims, but it must be with a sound company.

When you insure with USAA you are insuring with an association that has been serving the services since 1922. Assets at year end 1956 totaled $39,363,975 and during the same year over $15 million dollars were paid for losses and adjustments.

USAA understands the problems of those in the US Armed Forces, for active and retired officers manage and direct the Association.

USAA operates as a non-profit association... serving the officers of the US Armed Forces, a preferred risk group.* No salesmen are employed nor any commissions paid. Selling is done by mail.

No other insurance company offers automobile insurance for the US Armed Forces officer at a lower cost than that made available to USAA members. Currently stateside policyholders save 36% of standard rates on automobile insurance.

Whether you are stateside, or overseas, USAA is as close as your nearest mailbox, telephone or telegraph office. Your USAA insurance becomes effective as of postmarked time of application, unless a later date is specified.

Naval Officers' Wives Hear Mrs. Thomas—

The monthly luncheon of the Naval Officers' Wives Club was held on 21 March, at the Sheraton Park Hotel. Star-studded with a long list of distinguished guests, headed by Mrs. Charles S. Thomas, wife of the retiring Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Donald A. Quarles, wife of the Secretary of the Air Force, many members of the Naval Attaches' wives group were present, representing as they did, nations throughout the world.

Chaplain Arthur G. Boyer of the Naval Receiving Station, gave the invocation, and seated at the head table were Mrs. George C. Gilman, wife of the President of the D. C. Council of the Navy League; Mrs. R. G. Hopwood, who headed the hostess group for the affair; Mesdames Charles S. Thomas; D. M. Tyree, president of the Club; Quarles; Edmund G. Wooldridge; Vivian Burns; and Cecil K. Harper, vice-president of the Club. Mrs. Thomas proved a delightful speaker, telling many amusing anecdotes of situations that have happened during the four years her husband has served as Under-Secretary and Secretary.

USAFE Wives Raise $1,000 In Gala Review

WIESBADEN, GERMANY—There was standing room only at the Air Force General von Steuben Hotel Ballroom when the Officers Wives' Club here presented its Red, White and Blue Review. Singer (Mrs.) Jo Hildebrand, a former professional, directed the show.

After six weeks of rehearsals, the cast of 26 presented 35 song and dance routines, with Lt. Col. Ray Towne, USAF, as master of ceremonies. The three-hour Review was a complete sell-out for all three nights.

Similar variety shows were presented by the Wiesbaden O.W.C. in 1955 and 1956, the proceeds of which have gone to a scholarship fund for graduates of the General H. H. Arnold American High School. This year, W.O.W.C. will divide the $1000 brought in by the Review's three performances into two $500 scholarships. Both will be granted at the coming graduation exercises.

Director Jo Hildebrand stems from the Jack Benny-made-famous town of Waukegan, Ill. Her career in show business began as a sophomore at the local Township High School where she took part in the musical "Rose of Washington Square." While still in high school, she sang with several local dance bands and at 17, joined the Lawrence Welk Band in Chicago.

Army Daughters To Meet—

The Daughters of the U. S. Army of the Washington area will hold their monthly luncheon meeting, on Monday, 1 April, at 12:30 p.m., at the Westchester Apartments dining room. Election of officers will be held at the meeting, and following the luncheon, Frau Hanna Kiep of the German Embassy, will speak.

TC Have Spring Dinner Dance—

The Transportation Corps officers and their ladies gathered at Patton Hall, Ft. Myer, Va., for their annual informal Spring dinner dance, on the evening of 23 March.

■ STUTTGART, GERMANY—The American Women's Club celebrated its tenth anniversary here 20 March and the more than ten years of inspired assistance given destitute Germans, disabled war veterans of the Wehrmacht, orphaned children and refugee families by service wives was published in full.

One of the sources of income used by the Army women to finance their charitable activities was the "Thrift Shop," established soon after the club was conceived in late 1946.

Tribute paid the Service women was international. The Holland Commercial Airline, KLM, flew a great supply of tulips and other flowers from Holland to grace tables at the meeting and to make corsages for distinguished guests. ## CrewTAF Will Be Five On 1 April; Has Graduated More Than 75,000 Airmen

THE Crew Training Air Force, Randolph AFB, Tex., will be five years old 1 April. Commanded by Maj. Gen. Frank H. Robinson, USAF, veteran of 10,000 flying hours, CrewTAF has turned out more than 75,000 combat-capable airmen for the operational commands.

During the past year alone, CrewTAF has produced more than 20,000 combat-capable graduates for the operational commands—more than 1300 of them fighter pilots. They received training in air-to-air and air-to-ground tactics at the three bases which make up the fighter complex—Nellis AFB, Nev., Luke AFB, Ariz., and Williams AFB, Ariz.

In the fighter program Nellis utilizes the supersonic F-100, Luke the F-84 F and G, and Williams the F-86F.

The CrewTAF bomber complex turned out a total of 11,100 airmen from its B-47 medium jet-bomber transition training at McConnell AFB, Kans.; B-29, C-119, KC-97 and helicopter training at Randolph AFB, Tex., and its rugged escape, evasion and survival courses at Stead AFB, Nev.

The B-47 transition course at McConnell will soon give way to a complete combat crew training program. The B-29 and C-119 courses at Randolph have been discontinued.

CrewTAF's interceptor complex, which includes Tyndall AFB, Fla., Moody AFB, Ga., and Perrin AFB, Tex., graduated 2,400 pilots and observers in 1956. They received training in all-weather, radar intercept techniques in F-86D aircraft at Perrin and Tyndall, and in F-89D and F-94 aircraft at Moody.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

FIRST RELEASED PHOTO of the Republic F-105 Thunderchief which has been ordered by the Air Force for volume production. ## Military Materiel "Automation" Plant Tests Presage Wide Use With Combat Units In Field

FRIENDSHIP AIRPORT
BALTIMORE, Md.

MILITARY commanders, eager to get maximum utilization out of available equipment but hampered by critical shortages of skilled maintenance personnel, are placing great hopes on prospects of automatic test equipment to help them fulfill their mission.

Automation on the firing line—at SAC bases, aboard Navy carriers, with Army missile units—is coming, and with it will come a boost in over-all combat effectiveness.

This is the conviction of experts here at the Air Arm Division of Westinghouse Electric Corporation, under Dr. S. W. Herwald, where use of specially developed automatic devices is saving as much as 90 per cent of the time previously required in testing military equipment for fighter armament systems, computers, missile systems, automatic flight control systems and aircraft defense systems.

Lt. Wells Wigley, USN-Ret., told a JOURNAL reporter visiting the Air Arm Division how a circuit analyzer he helped develop can check 800 circuits at a rate of 10 circuits per second. "This means that a four hour test can be reduced to 20 minutes," Lieutenant Wigley said, "and besides, the automatic equipment means that we get greater reliability, too."

Nearby Lieutenant Wigley's test stand, an Automatic Molded Unit Test Set, developed by Westinghouse engineers, checks 3500 units during an 8-hour day, eliminating need for about 40 employees.

Dr. Herwald and his associates, although emphasizing that automatic testing for highly specialized military materiel "is still in a crawling stage," with another 5-10 years likely required for essential research and development work, are confident that equipment now used for plant checks can be modified readily for service with combat units.

They say it will be possible to design test gear for use in Air Force hangars, aboard Navy carriers and with Army field units. As at the Air Arm Division plant, this will permit military commanders to use semi-skilled servicemen to make checks which now require highly specialized manpower.

The automatic test machines in use here are so designed that little room is allowed for "human error."

Once the test machines are set in action, people watching them need only to watch the lights or check the punch cards. When something wrong is detected in a piece of equipment, lights either go on or off, and there is instant information on the exact location of the difficulty.

Mr. R. K. McDevitt, Manufacturing Manager of the Air Arm Division, told newsmen that the automatic equipment is having a major impact on operations here, where test hours have comprised 30 per cent of the total hours required to produce a system.

Martin Sales, Backlog Up, Net Income Down

George M. Bunker, President, announces that the Glenn L. Martin Company's sales and current backlog were the highest in the firm's history except for the World War II years of 1943 and 1944.

Commenting on the fact that more than half of Martin's $810,000,000 backlog is in contracts for guided missiles, Mr. Bunker said in the Company's Annual Report: "Our Nation's guided missile programs, as reflected in the current military budget, are assuming an ever increasing importance to the defense establishment. For more than ten years the Company has been working to enhance its capabilities in guided missiles. Emphasis has been placed on both technical competence and physical facilities."

Through his letter to stockholders and employees, Mr. Bunker also said that 1956 sales of Martin's products and services totaled $358,961,622, a 32 per cent increase over last year's sales of $271,862,342, although net income for 1956 was $10,839,656 compared to $13,285,297 in 1955. He attributed this net income decrease to two major factors:

(1) Inclusion in the 1955 net income figure of $3,485,555 in non-recurring warranty items and prior years' royalties previously in dispute.

(2) A lower percentage of profit on sales resulting from the fact that over half of the Company's 1956 sales consisted of cost-plus-fixed-fee developmental and pre-production contracts which are traditionally less profitable than production contracts.

Cranes For Matador—

The Air Force has ordered 67 hydraulic cranes, each capable of lifting 17,000 pounds, to assemble its Matador guided missiles at combat sites. The order for the cranes, to be made by Austin-Western Division of Baldwin-Lima-Hamilton Corp. at Aurora, Ill., amounts to $1,417,893, and was placed by the Air Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. Under combat conditions the missile will be handled by tactical equipment comprised of a transporter, a launching platform and the crane.

Lockheed Building Prototype—

A jet utility trainer-transport for use by the Armed Forces is under construction by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Lockheed is building a prototype of the plane, based on an interest expressed by the services for a light, fast transport.

"Value Engineering"—

Solar Aircraft Company is the Navy's first equipment supplier to receive a contract in a new Bureau of Ships "value engineering" program. Under a value engineering program, a creative study is made of every cost item in the product or service under investigation. Solar will carry out a value analysis of the company's 50 hp Mars gas turbine engine.

Col. Hansen Supply Chief

New Engineer Supply Officer at the Memphis, Tenn., General Depot is Col. Harry F. Hansen, USA. He replaces Lt. Col. Roscoe C. Holland, USA, who retired recently.

Army Missile Expert Leaves To Join Firm

Alfred Finzel, former Chief of Structures for the Army Ballistic Missile Agency at Redstone Arsenal, has been appointed a Project Engineer in Ramjet Design for the Wright Aeronautical Division of the Curtiss-Wright Corp.

Mr. Finzel has had more than fifteen years of experience as an engineer in the guided missile field. A former member of the German engineering team that developed the V-2 rocket missile at Peenemuende during World War II, he was brought to the United States by Army Ordinance shortly after V-E Day. Besides his work on the V-2 and the Redstone missile, he has also been active in the development of the Jupiter missile.

Mr. Finzel resides at 21 Archun Road, Packanack Lake, N. J., with his wife Brigitte and three children, Peter 11, Ursula 9, and Hans 6.

Calls AF Contracts Fair To Both Sides

The Air Force has developed dynamic procurement policies designed to produce better aircraft at reduced cost to the taxpayers, and at the same time to reward the aircraft industry for superior performance, Lt. Gen. Clarence S. Irvine, USAF, Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, USAF, declares.

Writing in Planes, a publication of the Aircraft Industries Association, General Irvine states that because the "infinite complexity of a modern aircraft or weapons system precludes detailed supervision by the military," the Air Force must "look to industry to provide the managerial and technical skills that, in turn, will produce a superior air weapon. There is no other industry where greater demands are made on management."

General Irvine says the incentive type contract "is a particularly handy tool for rewarding superior performance. This provides a formula for computing the distribution of savings below or cost overruns above the original target costs."

General Irvine also states that the Air Force is engaged in a "continuous program of encouraging its contractors to invest their earnings in additional facilities."

But, General Irvine points out, "these contractors would necessarily be chary of committing their investments into facilities for development and production of military materiel if they had to project their investments against the unknown quantity of a reassessment made years after contract completion."

Consequently, Gen. Irvine states, the Air Force has developed a "fair" system of contracts—"fair to the buyer and seller alike in the various situations that occur in Air Force procurement. They are fair because of a day-to-day review of costs which take into account the situation that existed at the time of a particular expenditure."

Contract For Army Helicopters To Hiller

Hiller Helicopters has been awarded a new contract totaling $4,795,872 for an undisclosed number of three-place Army H-23D helicopters.

The Army H-23D has a new transmission and drive system designed for 1000 hour service between overhauls, a Lycoming 250 horsepower engine, and an entirely re-designed tail rotor assembly; and is the first helicopter designed under the Army's concept of achieving lower operating costs over extended periods.

The 1000 hour overhaul period for the "D" is more than twice as long as that for the H-23C now in service with the Army.

Delivery of the H-23D to various Army posts and installations will start the latter part of 1957. The contract was placed through the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

House Group Studies Air Engine Industry

Representative F. Edward Hébert (La.), Chairman of the House Armed Services Investigations Subcommittee, has announced that an "intensive probe" is being made of the Nation's airplane engine industry.

The Congressman told a news conference that "we are confident that this investigation will result in saving the Government a tremendous sum of money."

He said: "The purpose of this investigation—the first of this sweeping nature ever made—is to determine a number of things, including (1) are the Navy and Air Force being charged an excessive amount of money; in other words, are the manufacturers reaping excessive profits (2) can greater economies be obtained in the purchase of engines and (3) are the contracts for the procurement of these engines adequate and suitable to protect the best interests of the Government?"

He said: "We anticipate that this investigation will bring about tremendous savings to the Government. On the basis of past experience, we believe a saving of five per cent would be a very conservative estimate. That would be $100,000,000 in this current fiscal year alone."

Mr. Hébert said that as a result of his subcommittee's investigation into the manufacture of airframes, the Government recovered $328,000,000 from the aircraft industry.

He said: "I want to emphasize that the aircraft industry voluntarily returned to the Federal treasury this huge sum of money immediately after the investigation began. This represents over-payments to aircraft concerns by the services. These are the funds which the companies themselves felt were excessive."

"The result was that the Air Force was paid back $178,000,000 and the Navy $150,000,000. The U. S. Treasury will probably benefit further when the contracts are finally renegotiated by the Government."

Mr. Hébert said that questionnaires have been sent to 17 engine manufacturers with a request for detailed information on their production, profits, etc. on all military contracts from 1952 through 1956. The questionnaires are returnable 13 May.

Public hearings will be held in June, dates to be set later. Witnesses will include representatives of all engine manufacturers and of the Air Force and Navy.

Questionnaires have gone out to the following:

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division, Westinghouse Electric Corp., Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., Boeing Airplane Co., General Electric Co., Allison Division of General Motors, Wright Aeronautical Division, Air Cooled Motors, Ford Aircraft Engine Division, Lycoming Division of AVCO, Nash-Kelvinator Corp., McCulloch Motors Corp., Buick Motor Continental Aviation & Engineering Corp., Chevrolet Aviation Engines, Studebaker-Packard Corp., and Willys Motor Corp.

Mr. Hébert stressed the tremendous cost of today's modern engines. He said: "For example, the J57, a jet engine used to power the Air Force's B-52 intercontinental bombers, the KC-135 tankers, and the F100 (Super Sabre), F101 (Voodoo) and F102 (Convair) supersonic fighters cost from $125,000 to $150,000 each. When you progress to the J75, which is used in the F105 and the F106, and which will also power the Boeing and Douglas commercial jet airliners, the cost zooms to $250,000 per engine."

USAF Describes Its And Marine Corps' Air Support; Army Drafts Reply

missions paper issued by Defense Secretary Wilson, but added that AF planes tend to "move out of the ground battle zone" and the Army will have to seek greater reliance on missiles.

Congressman Gavin asked the Army to prepare a study giving its views on the Air Force paper. This study is now in progress.

The AF report which also went to the House Armed Services Committee was divided into three sections, one of which listed the joint air-ground training program being conducted by the Army and Air Force.

Following is the full text of the other two sections. They deal with (1) the Air Force concept of close air support as it differs from the Marine Corps concept, and (2) the development of the Air Force's concept for employment of tactical air power.

AF vs. USMC Concepts Of Air Support

1. The Marine Corps is designed, equipped, manned, and trained to engage in "shock" type action which is limited in time, magnitude, and scope. Marine aviation, being integral to that Corps, is called upon to provide direct air support operations, the specific purpose of which is to support ground elements of the Fleet Marine Forces. Normally, one Marine Aircraft Wing supports one Marine Division. When one Marine Division is operating independently, its supporting Air Wing is normally centrally controlled at division level. However, if two or more divisions are operating together, the commander would effect centralization of control of all Air Wings in order to employ the air effort effectively.

2. The Marine Aircraft Wing is a task organization of groups and squadrons tailored in strength and composition to conduct various type air operations. Its size, therefore, is not constant. It is, however, a much larger organization than an Air Force Wing, although the two are not comparable as they have different missions and organization. A typical Marine Aircraft Wing might consist of 3-4 Marine Air Groups, a total of 12-16 combat squadrons in these groups, additional specialized squadrons, and possibly as many as 10,000 personnel and over 300 combat aircraft. The personnel and aircraft strength of a typical Air Force Wing, in no manner, approaches these figures.

3. One of the basic philosophical differences between the Marine and the Air Force systems for close air support is the degree of reliance placed by Army and Marine ground force commanders upon the supporting fires of their own artillery. Generally, Army commanders prefer to rely on their own artillery within the first thousand yards of the front. Conversely, Marine ground commanders can normally expect only flat trajectory fire of naval guns during the critical phases of ship-to-shore movement. Consequently, Marine commanders must place greater emphasis on close air support as a substitute for organic ground fires. The preliminary preparation of areas which are to be subjected to classic

Marine air-ground action has usually been accomplished by either naval air or tactical air. A satisfactory degree of air superiority and isolation of the battlefield is accomplished prior to such close support operations as envisioned by the Marine system.

4. The Marine system has definite advantages when employed solely in support of an operation which requires classic Marine action. As the type of operation deviates from the classic, the Marine system becomes progressively more unsatisfactory and costly. As an example, in the later stages of the Korean conflict, Marine air effort was considered no different from Air Force tactical air support and was controlled with no partiality toward its parent service. It was placed under the operational control of the Fifth Air Force.

5. Thus, any definitive comparison of the Air Force and Marine systems is faulty in the very premise that the two systems are designed for completely different types of ground operations and necessarily have entirely different allocations of artillery and supporting air. This concept is accentuated by Secretary Wilson's recent Roles and Mission Directive. The Air Force, while retaining responsibility for close air support to the Army, tends to move out of the ground battle zone. U. S. Army surface-to-surface missiles are directed to take over more of the close air support task with those new weapons.

6. Some Army personnel advocate close air support of the type and quantity that Marine air doctrine prescribes for Marine ground forces. This lavish use of close air support may be desirable in highly specialized operations such as amphibious landings, but not in large scale, extended-time ground operations. For the Air Force to attempt a similar close-air support strategy for Army forces would be an inefficient and wasteful use of air power, even though the economy of this nation could support such a program, which is doubtful when the requirements for the support of ground forces of smaller allied nations are added to the support needs of the US Army.

Development Of AF Concept Of Tactical Air

1. World War II was the beginning of what might be termed the first scientific application of tactical air operations, and the basic doctrine for tactical air operations, as they are known today, had its inception in the lessons and hard-won experience of that conflict. For example, in the North African Campaign we initially followed a practice of parcelling out our air power to corps commanders to use as they saw fit. It was not until we realized that we were taking a beating from a numerically inferior German Air Force that we changed our practice. Once our air forces had been centrally organized under an air commander, their total effectiveness was fully exploited to turn the tide of battle. Thus, the tenet of having air power controlled at the highest level that it can be effectively utilized was developed and is reflected today in the organization of each theater command.

2. Tactical air power must be provided with centralized control and direction at both theater and tactical air force level. Its component parts are specifically designed to complement each other and to be mutually supporting. They cannot be fully effective if they are divided. Division seriously reduces tactical air potentials of mobility, and flexibility, as well as making these piecemeal air elements extremely vulnerable to destruction by a more wisely controlled and employed air force. Control and direction of available air power must rest with a single air commander. Under such centralized control its full weight and power can be shifted quickly from one objective to another, or from one type mission to another, in order to meet unexpected threats; exploit success; and wield its tremendous influence in furtherance of the combined strategy.

3. Although it is perfectly natural that the infantry division commander feels that his job is of primary importance, he must realize that there are many other commanders who are concurrently thinking the same thing. If the available tactical air effort were to be split into the requisite number of small forces to satisfy all these individual desires for air support, tactical air power—the most powerful and strategic weapons system available to the theater commander—would be dissipated and denied him when he needed it most. In the obvious role that air forces will have in future conflicts, and due to the tremendous destructive power that could be employed by an enemy air force, this point cannot be overemphasized.

4. Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery made the following statement: "The dominant factor in a future war will be air power. . . . If we lose the war in the air, we lose the war, and lose it quickly. . . . We will not win the war in the air unless the air forces are allowed to retain their flexibility and unity, and unless the air command is organized accordingly."

5. General Eisenhower has recorded, also, some forthright and appropriate views on this subject. He wrote: "Battle experience proved that control of the air, the prerequisite to the conduct of ground operations in any given area, was gained most economically by the employment of air forces operating under a single command."

6. In order to permit a realistic interpretation of the problem it is necessary to review basic Army and Air Force doctrine. First, Army doctrine, as stated in FM 100-5 is quoted: "Army combat forces do not support the operations of any other component." This concept envisions that theater operations will culminate in the ground campaign with the over-all success of the theater mission being predicated on that action. The Army concept ignores the fact that both the United States Navy, and United States Air Force are capable of decisive action in their media.

7. Air Force doctrine holds that theater forces are organized and employed in accordance with a tenet of mutual support. Each theater component is dependent upon the other for the accomplishment of certain functions and activities associated with a particular force. Compatible with the objective of mutual support, each component force is concentrated on the task it is best able to accomplish. No one theater component is self-contained, or capable within itself, of achieving the theater mission. The Army/Air Force positions are therefore in conflict.

8. For all intents and purposes tactical air forces are synonymous with theater air forces. As such they are the only Air Force forces which can respond immediately to the desires of the theater command and/or theater air commander. In this respect any changes which affect, or can affect, the over-all theater mission can be exploited quickly as long as the tactical air forces are under the command and control of a single air commander. Piecemeal division of the Air Force forces would render ineffective the principles of centralized control and decentralized execution.

9. In the matter of quantitative requirements, wherein the Army desires one Air Force wing per division, the following information is submitted:

a. The Army states that this wing would be under the direction of the division commander and employed like artillery. This arrangement would, the Army feels, "guarantee" the division commander close air support when he needed it. Let's observe what would actually happen to both the artillery and the aircraft. If the enemy concentrated a large effort through this division the wing would be insufficient. The aircraft from other divisions within the corps and all artillery which had the range and flexibility to strike the target would be utilized by the corps commander under his control to counter the threat. If the attack on the corps were of great magnitude, the Army commander would have to call on aircraft and artillery support from other corps, retained under the control of the Army commander, to counter the threat. Thus one is forced into the basic principle of centralized control. These aircraft, as mentioned, would be available to counter ground threats only. At a glance one can see that one wing per division would be a significant number of aircraft that would not be available for use in the accomplishment of the over-all theater mission. Should this air effort be needed in the counter air battle, control would have to be exercised by the theater commander. This is presently accomplished by the theater air component commander who controls all air operating in the theater. Without centralized control, if the enemy were in an inactive ground status in front of one particular division or corps from the wing of aircraft available to this particular division or corps could not be properly utilized, and, thus, air weapon systems that have a tremendous capability would necessarily be wasted and misused. Centralized control is essential to exploit the full potential of airpower. The misuse of air as evidenced in North Africa was almost disastrous. This was an important lesson which we learned the hard way and at a great cost. In a nuclear war against an aggressive, determined, and superbly equipped enemy we cannot afford the price we would have to pay to relearn this lesson.

b. The foremost threat to any force is enemy air. The neutralization, and undeniably today, the destruction of such a threat is mandatory in order that the members of the land, sea, and air teams can be utilized effectively. It would be attractive, indeed, if the Air Force had the specialized aircraft, personnel, equipment, and supplies in such tremendous amounts to meet any foreseeable threat. The counterair battle could be accomplished by specialized aircraft in sufficient numbers to accomplish efficiently this task. We could have specialized interdiction, close air support, reconnaissance, and airlift aircraft in sufficient numbers so that one task would not detract from another. From the standpoint of National economy alone this can never be the case. As the over-all defense of the country is the foremost consideration, the military must place its greatest effort against the greatest threat. The greatest threat to our survival is enemy air power. This must be countered with a strong air defense, and an extremely effective retaliatory striking force. In the Zone of Interior these functions are performed by the Air Defense Command and the Strategic Air Command. The theater commander has tactical air forces to perform both of these functions. In a theater these functions are more varied than in the Zone of Interior. Thus, the theater air effort requires multi-purpose aircraft employed under centralized control to accomplish the task which at a particular time, poses the greatest threat to the theater mission.

10. In addition to the responsibilities for providing air support to the United States Army, the United States Air Force is committed to providing similar support to Allied Nations in the NATO structure, and possibly in the SEATO structure. The United States Government has recognized certain deficiencies existing in the military strength of its Allies. Several Allied countries possess the necessary military strength in the ground forces, but they are lacking in an adequate air capability. Accordingly, the military forces of these nations are being assisted through Military Assistance Groups. Since these nations do not possess an adequate air capability, United States Air Force responsibilities in the realm of tactical air support can no longer be limited solely to United States Army interests. To provide adequate, effective, and timely air support to the varied commands and Allied nations requires centralized control of air power under a single air commander.
